

TO ACT IN FRONT OF THE STORIES

The lecture is based on Ruth Zemke lecture given at SSO conference in San Diego Oct 22.

Staffan Josephsson

How can narrative theory and narratively engaged care can be a resource for everyday interpretation and co-creation?

I will draw from framework on narrative-in-action developed by Alsaker and Josephsson using theoretical resources from the anthropologist Cheryl Mattingly and the philosopher Paul Ricoeur to present four functions of narrative-in-action.

Thursday March 30th, 10–11:00

- Creating social meeting places rather than authority dominated encounters identifying the centrality of narratively organized meanings for connectivity, and togetherness when living with needs of care
- Crafting possibility spaces for openness and change identifying creativity, maintenance, and revision of agency, participation, and identity when living with diminishing capacities.
- Forming tool for establishing respect for vulnerability and destigmatizing health and social differences as a basic human condition when living with changing capacity.
- Founding resistance to dehumanizing functions of caring practices.

Lecture will include music performed by Maria Johansson Josephsson and Birgitta Henriksson

Welcome

Staffan Josephsson, Professor at the Department of Neurobiology, Care Sciences and Society. Photo: Private

You can register at the following link:

https://forms.office.com/e/Hg6hv7jmr_m

Or by scanning the QR code below:

